Tan Sri Musa Bin Tan Sri Hassan Started his career as a Probationary Inspector in 1969 and rose thru the ranks to become the Inspector-General of Police. He held this all important position from 2006 to 2010. As the IGP, he was chiefly responsible to advice the Prime Minister and the Yang Di-Pertuan Agong on the country's security situation in a weekly basis.

Amongst other qualifications, Tan Sri Musa is a Law graduate from Abeysworth College, Wales; holds' an Advanced Management Diploma from the University of Oxford, UK.

On retirement, Tan Sri dedicated his time to Lecture at UiTM at The Centre for Media Warfare and Intelligence, a programme for Masters and PhD program students.

It is obvious that Tan Sri is a supporter of sustainable activities.

For his stewardship as the top honco, Tan Sri has been bestowed honours from almost all the Head of State Governments, including Brunei, Singapore and Thailand.

Many of us will know him in the prosecution of the then Deputy Prime Minister in 1997. He was first IGP to introduce the 'Anti-Rasuah' campaign for the Police Department whilst being instrumental in the setting up of the Royal Commission of Police.
